John Ronald Reuel Tolkien

- He was born in 1892 in South Africa
- His father worked in a bank, unfortunately he died when little Ronald was 3
- His mother died when he was 12
- He was an English writer, poet, philologist, expert in Anglo-Saxon language and literature
- He was a professor at Oxford University
- He spoke at least 13 languages /German, Greek, Latin, French, Italian, Spanish, etc./

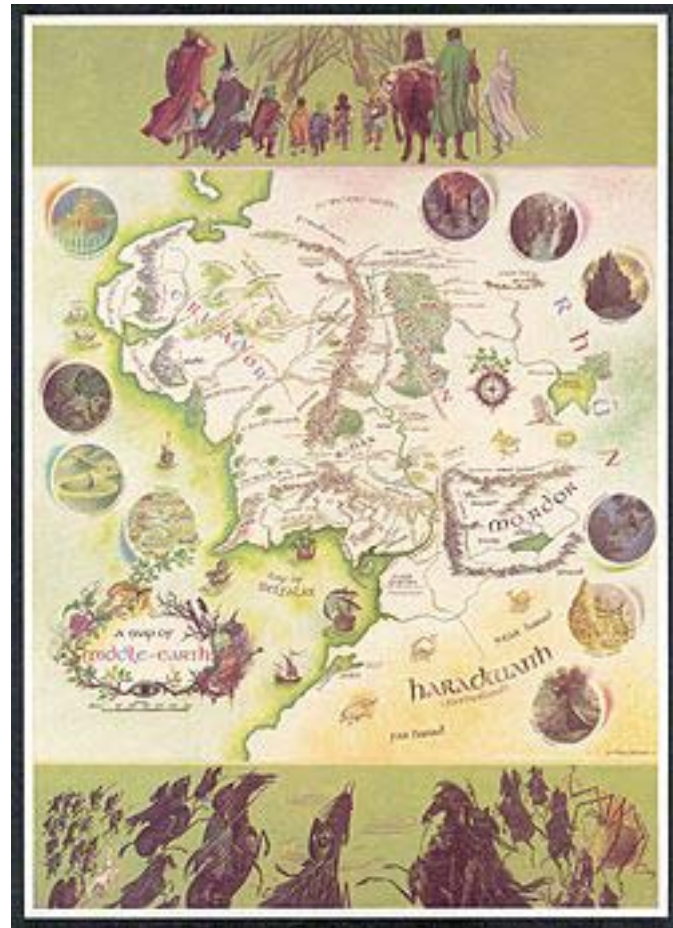

- He liked teaching the old poems from Scandinavia and Anglo-Saxon times which are full of monsters, heroes, fantasy creatures and mainly adventures
- 1972 he was awarded the Commander of the Order of the British Empire by Queen Elizabeth II

First writing

- One day Tolkien was correcting his students' essays and he got bored, so he took a piece of paper and started writing about a hobbit
- Who is a hobbit?
- A small creature living in the world called Middle Earth. He wears brightly colored clothes, especially green and yellow. He likes everyday rituals, good food and he likes smoking pipes. He prefers to feel safe and comfortable, doesn't like changes or adventures
- Originally he wrote these stories for his children

The Hobbit, or There and Back again

The main hero is a hobbit Bilbo Baggins who finds one day 13 dwarfs in his house

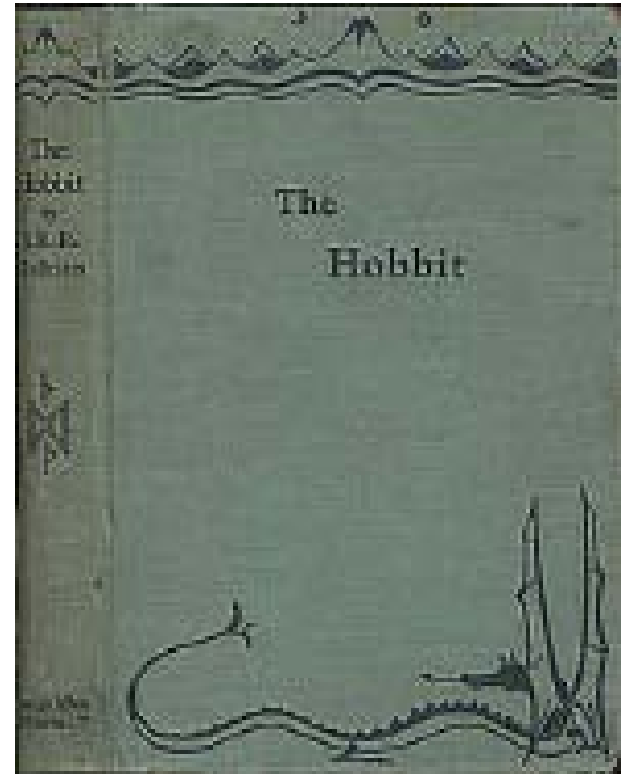

They came to ask for help because a dragon took their treasure

Bilbo helps them to get it back

He must go to the mountains full of terrifying creatures and go on to underground lakes and a dragon's den, on the way he must compete e.g. with a water monster and solve some riddles

The Hobbit
