THE DECLARATION OF INDEPENDENCE

IN CONGRESS, JULY 4, 1776.

The unanimous Declaration of the thirteen united States of America.

When in the Course of human Events, it becomes necessary for one People to dissolve the political bands which have connected them with another, and to assume among the Powers of the earth, the separate and equal Station to which the Laws of Nature and of Nature's God entitle them, a Decree ought to be published, explaining the causes which impel them to the Separation.

We hold these truths to be self-evident, that all men are created equal, that they are endowed by their Creator with certain unalienable Rights, that among these are Life, Liberty and the pursuit of Happiness.— That to secure these rights, Governments are instituted among Men, deriving their just Powers from the consent of the governed,— That whenever any Form of Government becomes destructive of these ends, it is the Right of the People to alter or to abolish it, and to institute new Government, laying its foundation on such Principles, and organizing its Powers in such Form, as to them shall seem most likely to effect their Safety and Happiness. Prudence, indeed, will dictate that Governments long established should not be changed for light and transient Causes; and accordingly we have suffered these from their former and unchangeable Character, but in the most absolute and unqualified Sense, we hold them no longer binding on us, and a prudent Acquiescence in them is a Stagnation and a Neglect of our Duty. — Now in the Progress of these Colonies, a long Train of Abuses and Usurpations, which have assumed the Form of a regular System, and which extend to the very Foundation of the Union, have in the most direct and violent Manner, evinced a design to reduce us to absolute Tyranny, — that we have a Declaration of Independence, which is necessary for the Preservation of our Lives, Liberty and Property, — and that we are now obliged to declare our Independence, and to maintain it by the Force of Arms.

We have declared our Independence, and we have now to settle our Form of Government, and to organize our Powers. We have agreed to a Declaration of Independence, which is necessary for the Preservation of our Lives, Liberty and Property, and we have now to settle our Form of Government, and to organize our Powers. We have agreed to a Declaration of Independence, which is necessary for the Preservation of our Lives, Liberty and Property, and we have now to settle our Form of Government, and to organize our Powers.

We have agreed to a Declaration of Independence, which is necessary for the Preservation of our Lives, Liberty and Property, and we have now to settle our Form of Government, and to organize our Powers.
